The Role

We are looking for enthusiastic ACEM Trainees who want to combine a great mix of rural and regional medicine with one of WA's best kept secrets in terms of location and lifestyle. Located on the South Coast of Western Australia, Albany is a town of 30,000 people with all the amenities of a small city with great restaurants, a state-of-the-art Entertainment Centre and stunning surrounds, with some of the best beaches in Australia close by.

Our new hospital opened in May 2013. The ED has 2 resus bays, 8 acute cubicles, 4 fast track cubicles as well as integrated computerised work management and pathology / radiology systems. There are three resident FACEMs in town. The roster comprises three doctors per shift including the FACEM so there is excellent supervision and apprentice-style learning. The Trainee has a segregated five hours of formal education per week. We are accredited for twelve months of Emergency Medicine Training with ACEM. We are situated 420kms from Perth with good air links.

The successful applicants will have previous emergency medicine experience and must be registered with the Australian Medical Board and registered as a trainee with the Australasian College for Emergency Medicine.
