The Role

The positions are accredited for up to 12 months of Advanced training in General Medicine, though applications for 6 months will be considered if necessary. The trainees are resident in Broome but provide outpatient clinics throughout the Kimberley region in hospitals, remote community clinics and Aboriginal Health Services, spending up to half their time travelling around the Kimberley region by road or aircraft (including light aircraft).

These positions provide a fantastic opportunity to gain extensive experience in Indigenous health and ambulatory and community based medicine in addition to continuing to gain experience in hospital medicine. The majority of patients you will see have multiple complex chronic comorbidities, including conditions such as rheumatic heart disease and some infectious diseases rarely encountered in tertiary hospital settings. Supervision is provided by four long term general medical consultants, whose special interests include diabetes, rheumatic heart disease, viral hepatitis, obstetric medicine and respiratory medicine. There are also visiting subspecialists (Cardiology, Nephrology, Rheumatology and Dermatology). You will become part of a close knit team that also works closely with primary care providers and Aboriginal Health Workers. There are opportunities to undertake clinical audit and/or research projects.

Out of hours work is minimal, with calls being taken almost entirely by the consultants, so you will also have opportunities when off work to enjoy the beautiful Kimberley environment.

The successful applicant will hold current registration as a medical practitioner with Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency, and be eligible for Advanced Training in General Medicine in 2020 (including successful completion of RACP Part 1 and Part 2 exams). Subspecialty advanced trainees doing dual training in General Medicine are strongly encouraged to apply.
